Two escape youth detention center

Two inmates of a South Jersey youth detention center escaped Saturday night, reports said. According to WABC-TV, the two Bridgeton men — Hakim Walls, 18, and Jermaine Jackson, 20 — and a juvenile overpowered a guard at the Hopewell Township facility and fled on foot. The juvenile was quickly captured. Both men, who were held on weapons charges, are considered dangerous.

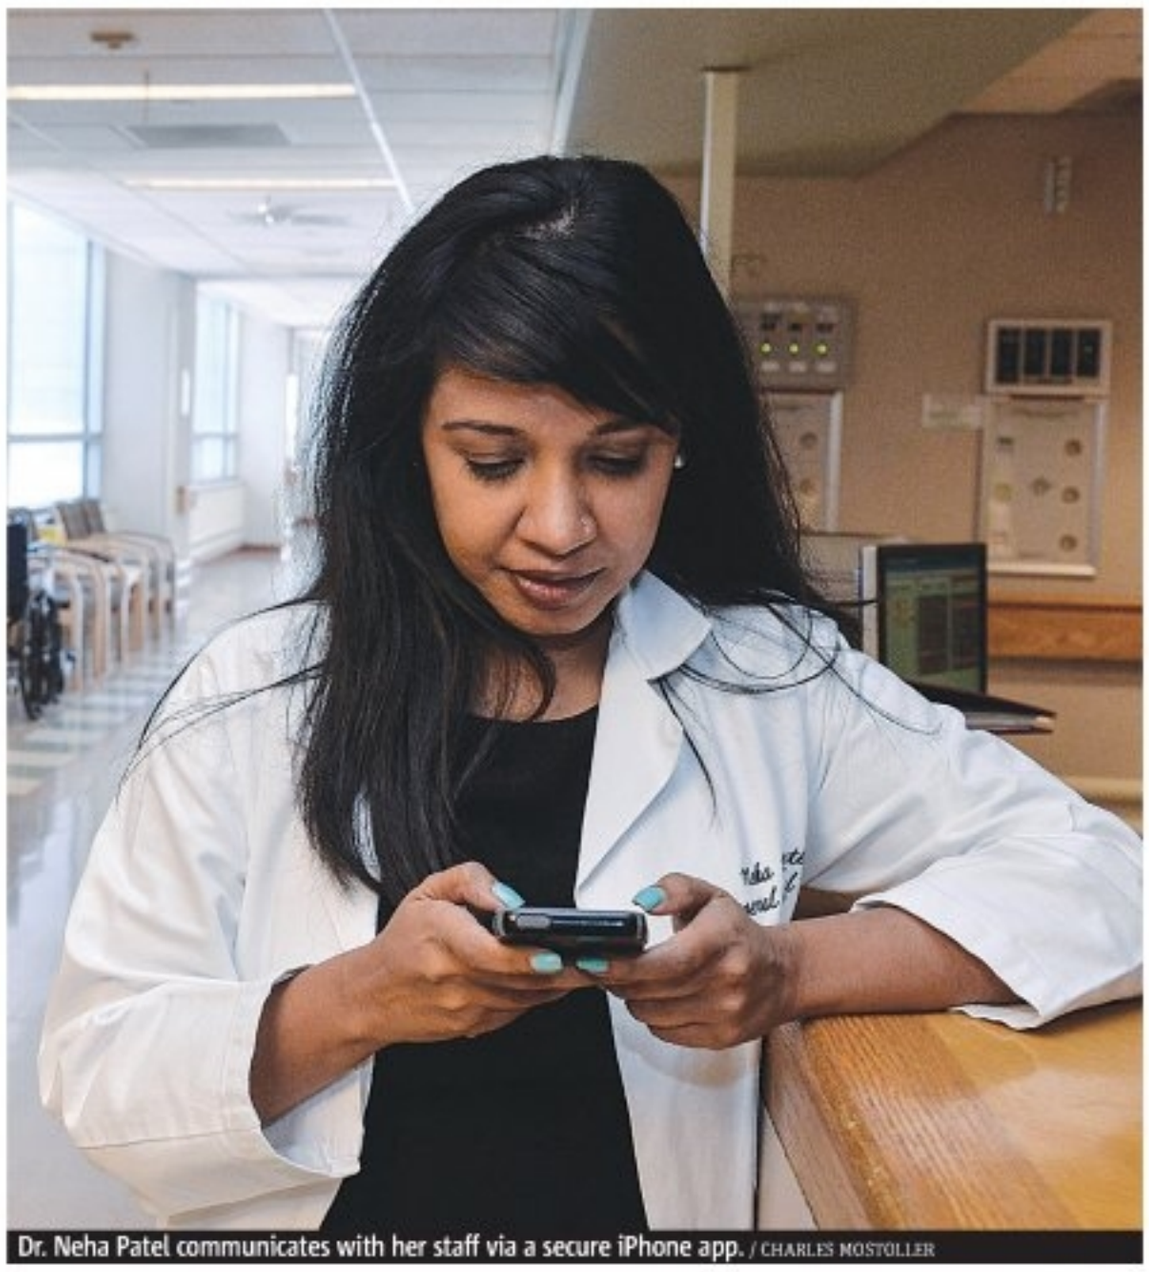
The future of medicine in the age of Millennials

Health. Hospital officials are preparing to evolve their systems to accommodate the influx of Millennials.



Dr. Neha Patel communicates with her staff via a secure iPhone app. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER

Dr. Stephen K. Klasko wants young people to think about how they receive health care in 2014.

"And then think about everything else they do in their life," said the Jefferson Health System president and CEO. "How do they get travel? They don't go over to a travel agency anymore and sit down with somebody, right?"

Hospitals, like so many other businesses in the age of the Millennials, are forced to evolve to meet the needs of the generation raised on mobile devices and social networks, he said. Health systems are building strategies to serve this technology-centric Millennial generation as it matures and begins to use more health services.

"Think about the fact that the Friday after Thanksgiving you can be in your pajamas watching 'Game of Thrones' and do all of your holiday shopping," he said. "But if you get a stomachache, you still got to call, go through a complicated thing, and then drive into town to get care."

Klasko pointed the demise of video rental giant Blockbuster, which, he said, never made it easier for customers to access the company's collection, whether by a mail-in or a online streaming service.

And big-box consumer electronics stores are losing the battle with online retailers that can offer competitive prices along with fast delivery rates.

"I believe the era of 'come to my hospital ... and we'll take care of you' will not be tolerated by the younger generations," he said.

Dr. Bill Hanson, associate director of Surgical Critical Care at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, pointed to his hospital's continued efforts to build its electronic filing system of patient information.

Hanson looks toward the possibilities of the fitness trackers, the recently announced Apple Watch and other "wearable devices," which collect information that could be used to paint a more complete picture of a patient's health.

"To be clear, this is something that we're all trying to understand — how it works — and none of it started at this point," Hanson said. "[But] this is all stuff that's targeted at our entire patient community, but intends to be better adopted by young patients."

Health care going mobile

Klasko, who has done work with Apple, said the brilliance of the company's late founder, Steve Jobs, was recognizing in the 2000s that the world would transition into a digital age by the 2010s.

"As a health care provider, I need to make it easier for people to access care," he said. "We will unveil over the next year or so an opportunity for you to put 'stomachache' and get a GPS to a Jefferson doctor," he said.

Pregnant woman hit, killed by stray bullet

A pregnant woman was killed Sunday by a stray bullet while sitting on her Frankford porch, police said.

As of press time, the newborn was clinging to life in critical condition, police said.

Police said the victim, a yet-to-be identified 26-year-old black female who was full-term pregnant, was pronounced dead Sunday at 12:36 p.m.

She was found by police on Sunday with one gunshot wound to the face on the 1500 block of Adams Avenue near Griscom Street. The bullets were fired more than a block away, according to the Daily News.

The woman was rushed to Temple University Hospital where she underwent an emergency C-section before she died from her injuries.

No arrests had been made, and no weapon had been recovered, police said.

Police brought in three men for questioning.

Three men were reportedly in custody Sunday afternoon for questioning, including the suspected target of the shooting, but the shooter was not believed to be in custody.

Police were searching for a late-model white Ford Crown Victoria with tinted windows, which the shooter may have used to flee the scene.

No graveyard, plenty of dust for Queen Lane

Germantown. After no bodies were found underneath an old housing project, it was finally razed.

After years of concerns that a graveyard lurked underneath the 16-story Queen Lane tower in Germantown, it was finally demolished Saturday.

"It has taken us over three years, and approximately $1.8 million later, [but] we are here today," said Philadelphia Housing Authority Director Kelvin Jeremiah before he pushed the detonation button around 7:15 a.m.

The explosion echoed through the early morning still. A moment later, the building collapsed to one side as onlookers cheered. But the scene turned chaotic as a massive dust cloud rolled down the street and chased onlookers away.

The demolition was held up for years after researchers discovered that the building sat above an 18th-century potter's field for "strangers, Negroes, and Mulattoes." Evidence suggests the remains were removed years ago.

"It has taken from 2010 literally to 2014 to work through the issues and concerns of all the consulting parties," said Michael Johns, PHA's VP for development. "No human remains were found."

Former Philly state trooper killed in barracks ambush

Pike County. State police said the gunman, who also injured a second officer, is still at large.

The search continues for a gunman who ambushed two state troopers, killing one, in an attack at a state police barracks in the northeast corner of Pennsylvania, police said.

Police said Saturday that they were questioning one man about the shooting, which occurred at the Blooming Grove barracks around 11 p.m. on Friday, but that the search was ongoing.

"I know a lot of people are wondering if the threat is resolved. It is not," State Police Commissioner Frank Noonan said. "The individual who perpetrated this heinous crime is still at large."

Corporal Bryon Dickson, who transferred out of the Philadelphia barracks only a few months ago, died Friday.

Trooper Alex Douglass, who was wounded in the ambush, underwent surgery and was in critical but stable condition. REUTERS

Vermont. Liberal Senator Sanders may seek US presidency

Bernie Sanders, one of the Senate's leading liberals, said on Sunday he is thinking about running for U.S. president in 2016 as either a Democrat or an independent in a move that could complicate Hillary Clinton's path to the White House.

Sanders, an independent from Vermont, could pose a challenge from the left to Clinton, widely seen as the front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination. She has not officially said she is a candidate but has acted very much like one. REUTERS

A boat packed with up to 250 African emigrants trying to reach European shores sank on Sunday off the Libyan coast and many passengers died, a spokesman for the Libyan navy said.

'Goodell must go' signs flown above stadiums

Women's rights. The demonstration comes as the NFL scrambles to manage criticism over its handling of Ray Rice.

A women's rights group flew banners over pro football stadiums on Sunday calling on NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell to resign over his handling of former Baltimore Ravens star Ray Rice's domestic violence case, the group said.

The organization, UltraViolet, flew banners reading, "#GoodellMustGo," over stadiums in Cleveland, New Jersey and San Francisco ahead of Sunday's games. The group says it will also fly the signs before tonight's game in Indianapolis.

The three-time Pro Bowler was cut by the Ravens and indefinitely suspended from the league last week after website TMZ published a security video taken inside a New Jersey casino elevator showing Rice knocking out his then-fiancee.

Goodell originally suspended Rice for just two games — a move that drew heavy criticism from many fans. REUTERS

Washington said countries in the Middle East had offered to join air strikes against Islamic State militants and Australia said it would send troops, but Britain held back even after the group beheaded a British hostage and threatened to kill another.

U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry has been touring the Middle East to try to secure backing for U.S. efforts to build a coalition to fight the Islamic State militants who have grabbed territory in Syria and Iraq.

The United States resumed air strikes in Iraq in August for the first time since the 2011 withdrawal of the last U.S. troops, fearful the militants would break the country up and use it as a base for attacks on the West.

"We have countries in this region, countries outside of this region, in addition to the United States, all of whom are prepared to engage in military assistance, in actual strikes if that is what it requires," Kerry said. REUTERS

Fate of UK hangs in balance after Scotland polls

The future of Scotland and the United Kingdom looked uncertain on Sunday, five days before a historic referendum on independence, as polls showed the rival campaigns running desperately close.

Out of four new polls, three showed those in favor of maintaining the union with a lead of between 2 and 8 percentage points. But an ICM poll conducted over the Internet showed supporters of independence in the lead with 54 percent and unionists on 46 percent.

The final weekend of campaigning before Thursday's vote brought thousands of people on to the streets of the capital Edinburgh and of Scotland's largest city, Glasgow. REUTERS

North Korea sentenced U.S. citizen Matthew Todd Miller to six years of hard labor for committing "hostile acts" as a tourist to the country, a statement carried by state media said, as the United States requested his immediate pardon and release.

"He committed acts hostile to the DPRK while entering the territory of the DPRK under the guise of a tourist last April," the short statement said. The Korean version of the statement described Miller's punishment as a "labor re-education" sentence.

Associated Press, which was able to attend the trial, said Miller was tried under Article 64 of the North Korean criminal code, which refers to espionage.

Miller, is in his mid-20s and hails from Bakersfield, California. He entered North Korea in April this year, whereupon he tore up his tourist visa and demanded Pyongyang grant him asylum, according to a release from state media at the time. He was traveling without foreign guides, according to Uri Tours, the company that organized the trip. REUTERS

Catholic Church. Pope marries couples who have kids, cohabited

Pope Francis married 20 couples on Sunday, some of whom had already lived together and had children, in the latest sign that the Argentine pontiff wants the Catholic church to be more open and inclusive.

In the first wedding he has performed in his 18-month-old papacy, Francis took each couple through their vows in turn — including Gabriella and Guido, who already had children and thought such a marriage would be impossible, official broadcasting service Radio Vaticana said.

"The people getting married on Sunday are couples like many others," the diocese of Rome said in a statement. "Some already live together, some already have children."

Francis has expressed tolerance regarding other topics that are traditionally taboo in the Church, asking, "Who am I to judge [a gay person] who seeks God and has goodwill?"

His approach contrasts with that of his predecessor, the German Pope Benedict, who said that threats to the traditional family undermined the future of humanity itself.

Bishops from all over the world are due to come to the Vatican in October for a major meeting on the family, which the Jesuit pope referred to in the homily to Sunday's Mass as the "bricks" on which society is built.

The bishops are expected to discuss issues such as marriage, divorce and contraception at the synod from Oct. 5-19.

The pope has said the Church must end its obsession with teachings on abortion, contraception and homosexuality, and become more merciful, or risk collapsing "like a house of cards." REUTERS

1 Oprah to blame for Lindsay's London travels

If Londoners aren't thrilled about having Lindsay Lohan as a new fixture, they have Oprah Winfrey to thank. Lohan tells the Telegraph that her Winfrey-produced reality series made life in NYC untenable. "After the Oprah show, it was kind of hard for me to be in New York," she says. "There started to be paparazzi, and I didn't have that in New York in the beginning." Later in the interview, Lohan implies that she was doing court-ordered community service in a morgue when Whitney Houston's body was rolled in.

2 Kanye stops a show because of two people

Kanye West is getting all sorts of heat for halting a performance in Sydney when his demands that every single person in the arena get on their feet wasn't met due to two uncooperative fans. "I can't do this show until everybody stand up," West told the crowd. "Unless you got a handicap pass and you get special parking and s—." Yeah, about that: West apparently spotted two audience members who were still seated, and when he singled them out, one waved her prosthetic limb at him, prompting an appropriate response from West of, "OK, you fine." He then turned his attention to the second one despite others trying to signal that the fan was actually wheelchair-bound and not just recalcitrant. According to the Daily Mail Australia, West would not continue with the show until he had staff confirm the non-standing offender was indeed in a wheelchair. He's nothing if not thorough.

Darryl Hannah and Neil Young keep on rockin' in the free world.

3 Darryl Hannah and Neil Young: The new hot celeb couple?

In the "not actually that surprising when you think about it" department, Darryl Hannah and Neil Young are reportedly an item — just a little over a month after Young split from his wife of 36 years. "They've been dating for months. They've taken no effort to even hide it," a source tells People magazine. "They've appeared at many, many protest rallies together over the past year. The fans have known about this for months." Wow! If that isn't the snarkiest anonymous source quote in history. It's like, "What, you only just heard about Darryl Hannah and Neil Young now? Loser!" Anyway, Young even reportedly took regular Skype notes from Hannah on his recently recorded album and told others in the studio that she is his girlfriend. Because nothing says blossoming romance like a face on a laptop screen critiquing your guitar solos.

Interview. Harry Connick Jr. is also amazed there's a 'Dolphin Tale 2'

You aren't the only one mystified that there's a sequel to 2011's "Dolphin Tale," which ended with the aquatic mammal in need of a prosthetic tail getting a prosthetic tail. Where do you go from there?

"When they came up to me to do 'Dolphin Tale 2,' I thought they were kidding around," recalls Connick. "How do you make another one of these? And when I read the script, I got it."

In real life, the dolphin on which the movie is based — Winter — lost her mate at the Clearwater Marine Aquarium (which is now a major tourist attraction). The story of finding her a new one became a new script.

Reunited with the same cast and characters, Connick didn't have to do much prep work — but acting with animals is always tricky, even when they're as smart as dolphins. "The dolphins maybe don't always do what they're intended to do," he says. "But when you're in an environment like this, it doesn't matter. If it takes an hour to shoot something that should have taken half an hour, nobody really cares."

Connick doesn't act too often; he's busy with his music and appearances on "American Idol." But this part of his career goes all the way back to a small role in 1990's "Memphis Belle."

"I like performing," he explains. "Way back when I was a kid, I was involved in different kinds of performing — whether it was theater or playing music on stage. [Film] was just a natural progression of what I've always done." MATT PRIGGE

The dark side

Harry Connick Jr. Cozi Zuehlsdorff in "Dolphin Tale 2." / WILSON WEBB

Not for the family

The last three films Connick Jr. has been in have been family-oriented. He can do darker. His acting breakthrough was 1995's "Copycat," in which he played a giddy serial killer. "It's not family films, per se, that I'm drawn to. The thing that draws me is they're good stories," he says.

Speaking of "Copycat," when asked why director Jon Amiel thought of him to play a deranged psychopath, he says he never got an answer. "That made me wonder what led him to believe I could do that," he recalls. "That's a question I'd like answered at some point."

Film. The Toronto International Film Festival gave us a lot to chew on, but no clear standouts

This year's Toronto International Film Festival closes without the sense of certainty that had become a mainstay in recent years. Last year, for example, many left TIFF feeling there was no chance "12 Years a Slave" could lose the Best Picture race or Matthew McConaughey wouldn't be an Oscar-winner for "Dallas Buyers Club," and look what happened there. But for 2014, TIFF didn't so much kick off the Oscar race as it nudged it into existence. Most Best Picture contenders are coming out of the festival with their prospective nominations endorsed less by fists in the air than by shrugs. It really is still anyone's game.

Oscar chances

This year's early awards speculation at TIFF was much more about performances than films, with two clear early favorites. Eddie Redmayne offers a transformative, career-defining performance as Stephen Hawking in "The Theory of Everything" (pictured) that is sure to be nominated (if not a win). And Julianne Moore's turn in "Still Alice," as a woman with early onset Alzheimer's, looks likely to nab her that long-deserved trophy. Oscar-winner Reese Witherspoon's performance in "Wild" also seems like a safe bet for a nomination.

Big sales

"The Last 5 Years" was the first big sale of the festival in what turned out to be a good year for pickups out of Toronto. The most attention-grabbing, though, was Paramount's acquisition of Chris Rock's comedy "Top Five," which sold for a reported $12.5 million.

The Weinstein Company's Radius imprint picked up crowd-pleaser "The Last 5 Years," a musical starring Anna Kendrick that left audiences grinning (even if some critics didn't like the taste). Everyone else can make up their minds next Valentine's Day, when it is slated for release.

Winners

Winning the TIFF People's Choice Award has often meant a shot at Best Picture, if not the big prize itself. Last year's "12 Years a Slave" went from Toronto to Oscar, following in the footsteps of "The King's Speech," "Slumdog Millionaire" and "American Beauty." So does that mean that this year's winner, "The Imitation Game," (pictured) has some high hopes for Oscar? It certainly does now. Fire up the jets, Mr. Weinstein.

In it to win it

It's time for the latest group of C-list celebs to strut their stuff on "Dancing with the Stars." But who will win? Who will be sent home early? We gave these tough questions some thought so you wouldn't have to in our first look at — wow — Season 19. LISA WEIDENFELD

Jonathan Bennett

Claim to fame: Was the cute guy in "Mean Girls"

Chances: Bennett just filmed a Lifetime movie where he co-starred with "Glee"'s best dancer, Heather Morris, so maybe she gave him tips. We think he'll stick around for a while. And we may be setting our DVRs for that Lifetime movie.

Betsey Johnson

Claim to fame: Fashion design

Chances: Johnson's bio indicates she took dance lessons as a kid, so we think she's got moves. And for anyone thinking she's too old to win, keep in mind that she's famous for cartwheeling down the runway after her shows, so don't count her out too quickly.

Tommy Chong

Claim to fame: He's Chong of Cheech and Chong, man!

Chances: Mr. Chong has certain lifestyle habits that we suspect may inhibit his ability to, say, focus on steps. On the other hand, he's had these habits for a while, so chances are good he's able to work with them. Then again, he's 76 years old!

Bethany Mota

Claim to fame: YouTube star

Chances: Mota is only 19: Just something to keep in mind about someone with 7 million YouTube followers for her style and makeup tutorials. We think that popularity will help her stay on the show — all those fans have to turn into votes, right?

Randy Couture

Claim to fame: Ultimate fighter, now trying to act

Chances: Fighting involves some fancy footwork, right? We think Couture will be able to translate those skills, assuming he has some sense of rhythm. But it might be hard for him to work with a partner instead of against one.

Lolo Jones

Claim to fame: Olympic athlete

Chances: Well, Jones at least shows a willingness for trying new things: She switched from Summer Olympics track events to competing at the Winter Olympics as a bobsledder. But she didn't win at either Olympics. Maybe this will be the event she finally wins?

Lea Thompson

Claim to fame: "Caroline in the City," "Back to the Future"

Chances: Thompson has a cute cameo in the pilot for "A to Z," so we think there's some built-in good-will for her among "Back to the Future" fans. And hey, didn't a big part of "BTTF" take place on the dance floor?

The new season of "Dancing with the Stars" premieres tonight at 8 on ABC. / ABC, RICK ROWELL

Janel Parrish

Claim to fame: Swinging back and forth between good and evil as Mona on "Pretty Little Liars"

Chances: We assume Parrish is not quite as sneaky in real life as she is on "Liars," but we're kind of hoping she plots against the other contestants to rise to the top, just like Mona would.

Alfonso Ribeiro

Claim to fame: Carlton from "Fresh Prince of Bel-Air"

Chances: A compilation of his dancing on "Fresh Prince" has been viewed 7.5 million times on YouTube. Carlton wasn't known for his moves, but his enthusiasm wins people over. Our money is on Ribeiro to win the whole thing.

Michael Waltrip

Claim to fame: NASCAR driver

Chances: Now that he's semi-retired from racing, he runs marathons. Clearly, Waltrip has a competitive side, which always helps on something like "DWTS." Maybe that drive (see what we did there?) will help him master a new set of skills.

Tavis Smiley

Claim to fame: Serious journalist, hosted two presidential debates

Chances: Smiley has many honorary doctorates for his work discussing racial issues, but we're not sure any of those will help him on the dance floor. We like the idea of an NPR host getting a little goofy, though.

Antonio Sabato Jr.

Claim to fame: "General Hospital," "Melrose Place"

Chances: Sabato seems like one of those contestants who will surprise viewers with his charm and pizzazz. We give him good odds for reminding people why they liked him in the '90s.

Sadie Robertson

Claim to fame: She's on "Duck Dynasty."

Chances: Robertson has written a book and is apparently a motivational speaker despite the fact that she's only 17. With her full schedule, will she have time to focus on her dancing (and also high school, because she's still in high school)?

Runner's high is real

Aside from the long-term benefits, there's also that feel-good factor: The neurotransmitters serotonin (pleasure), noradrenaline (concentration) and dopamine (alertness) are all released during exercise.

Reasons to jog your memory

When it comes exercise, even a little bit goes a long way. EDWARD THOMPSON

Research is pointing firmly to sitting as the new smoking. While most people know that exercise can curb obesity, heart disease and even certain types of cancer, it also has immediate effects on brainpower. "Physical exercise turns our brain on," says John Ratey, a psychiatry professor at Harvard University.

As it's become widely accepted that some form of aerobic workout is the most beneficial, harder regimens like CrossFit and endurance races have popularized. A jog around the block no longer seems adequate. But that's not so.

Ratey, a 66-year-old exercise advocate who has been known to make his audiences do Hindu squats, wants to take the focus off people's choice of activity. You don't have to push yourself to the limit to gain the benefits of exercise, he says: "Get out and walk!"

Want to make your meeting productive? Try taking it out of the conference room. / THINKSTOCK

1 Improve your meetings

Some of the world's most creative companies hold walking meetings. Interestingly, surroundings don't greatly impact thinking, a recent study found: "I thought walking outside would blow everything out of the water, but walking on a treadmill in a small, boring room still had strong results," explains co-author Marily Oppezzo.

2 Enjoy a lifetime of learning

Getting your body moving will improve your ability to retain and manipulate information. "Doing exercise promotes improvement overall in our capacity to learn," Ratey says. "What it does in the brain is immense and it really improves the brain's ability to be [adaptable]. The only way we learn anything is to have ourselves grow at the nerve cell level, so exercise is the best promoter of that."

3 Stay at the top of your game

Being active is vital to preventing cognitive decline, which can't necessarily be kept at bay through brain teasers like Sudoku and crosswords alone.

4 Become a morning person

A quick trot up to the office might just be what's needed to prevent that morning meeting sluggishness. In a recent study, researchers from Stanford University found that even a 10-minute walk stimulates creativity inside the brain. "[Study subjects] who were walking were more talkative than those sitting down — their ideas are more active and more urgent in streaming out," study co-author Dan Schwartz tells us.

Applying to school just got less mysterious

Getting in. Here are the latest trends in the world of college admissions.

The average student applies to eight or nine schools, according to AdmitSee. / DIGITAL VISION

To college hopefuls, the perfect application is as coveted and elusive as the allegorical golden ticket. Yet information about what admissions offices are actually looking for has always been scarce — until now. Startup AdmitSee collects and analyzes applications from students who successfully matriculated to undergraduate and graduate school.

We talked to AdmitSee's founders Stephanie Shyu and Lydia Pierce Fayal about some of the trends AdmitSee has discovered.

How many schools do most students apply to?
The average student applies to 8.35, according to AdmitSee. But that number just paints part of the picture, as a growing number are applying to 10 or more schools.

"According to our data, 25 percent of students are applying to more than 11 schools," says Fayal.

What is the most popular way to start an essay?
Given the topics that most students write about (see right), it's no surprise that nearly half of the essays AdmitSee collected began with either the word "I" or "I'm."

What extracurricular activities do colleges like?
According to AdmitSee's data, most students are drawn to a core set of after school activities. The most popular clubs (excluding sports) are, in order:

- National Honor Society
- Tutoring or mentoring
- Student council
- (Threeway tie for fourth place) Debate team; math team; school newspaper

Essays

What do applicants write their personal essay about?

Finding the perfect essay topic can be agonizing, but it turns out that most students stick to three basic themes. They are:

- Creative personal story
- Issue of personal significance
- Family background

explains how to lead

once, and it's important to spend your life doing something you enjoy and really interests you and that you'll be really pleased spending your life doing. So if you have a great idea for a business, if you feel you have an idea that can fill a gap and help make people's lives better: Try it and make a go of it. Don't do a profession because you think you're going to make a lot of money in it and it's going to be horribly dull.

A lot of young people are told things like, "You need to do this, this and this, or you need this degree, before you can start a business." How do you know when the time is right?
I think if you want to run a business, I'm not sure that it's necessary to spend too many years studying. I think it's better if you get on and do it and learn while doing it. But if you have five or six years building in business rather than studying to build a business, you're five or six years ahead of everyone else and then you're not saddled with loads of debt. If you want to become an entrepreneur, I'd say it's worth taking the risk.

How do you know who to hire and who to trust?
Well, if it's your first business, I suspect you'll have some life-long friends, and it's always good to have friends around you when building a business. I had two or three friends join me in the early days and it was delightful. Then you just have to get out and interview people and see if they are as passionate about what you do as you are. You want people who passionately believe in what you want to do and surround yourself with those kinds of people.

You've said that you don't read business books.
Yeah, I haven't read business books; I've glanced at one or two. I think there's too many lists. So, what I've tried to do is write a book that's more readable and it tells stories.

What is the biggest mistake young entrepreneurs are making?
I think a lot of young entrepreneurs are not good delegators; they try to do everything themselves. So they need to fight early on to learn the art of delegation.

Why do you feel corporations are so stifling of creativity and personality?
It's strange, because working for companies should be a fun, pleasant experience. And so often, as you say, it is a stifling, boring experience. And people are made to dress in formal clothes — ties and suits. They work out of unpleasant environments and that constitutes their life. Most of their life is spent at work. It is sad and it often comes down to bad leadership, sadly, and a lack of realization that if they were good leaders they would make sure that people enjoyed their jobs.

Bonus question

What are your tips for somebody who has a great idea, but isn't sure how to sell it?

Keep it simple and clear-cut. And if you find that everybody blanks over, then maybe your idea is not a good one. Having said that, most people would say why an idea is not good. It's very rare people will say an idea is great. So in the end, if you really believe in what you want to do, you just have to get on and do it.

NEW DIABETES STUDY SHOWS:
*Insulin Shots More Than Double the Risk of DEATH in Type II Diabetics

A new clinical study has shown that the disease of TYPE II DIABETES CAN BEGIN TO BE REVERSED in as little as 1 WEEK!

A free guide has just been made available to Type II Diabetics detailing an approach that appears to be more powerful than any drug known to modern science. The free diabetic guide explains in plain English how many diabetics have been able to reduce and eliminate their drugs and insulin injections, lose weight without exercise, reduce and eliminate the risk for diabetic complications, restore pancreatic function, and even become non-diabetic.

The free guide also reveals rarely used diagnostic testing that is helping doctors understand potential causes of diabetes beyond weight gain, genetics and lack of exercise.

Letters

Doing nothing will embolden the powers behind ISIS

Re: 'What does US gain from fighting ISIS?' (Metro, Sept. 12-14) Letter writer Joseph Connell is probably correct to write that for now, "ISIS poses no imminent or credible danger to America's security." The hooligans we see on the evening news are more ludicrous than anything else. The problem is the people is behind them. They are the alumni of Saddam Hussein's Baath Party, who faithfully served the Soviet Union for years. If Vladimir Putin renews his relationship with them, we face years of crises.
SEAN O'ROURKE, VIA EMAIL

Men can be victims, too

The media's broadcast of the condemnation of Ray Rice perpetuates our nation's discrimination on the issue of domestic violence. While the amount of force used by Rice in the incident is debatable, it is indisputable that domestic violence is not gender-specific and male victims of domestic violence are not given the same consideration and assistance by society in general and by the state. If the outcome had resulted in Rice being knocked out, he would have been mocked.

3 Stories to watch as Eagles face the Colts

NFL. The Eagles get ready for a big early season test Monday night in Indianapolis.

The Eagles certainly have plenty of prime time experience from last season, when several of their games were flexed week after week down the stretch and the Birds showed they could excel under the lights. Though last week's 17-point win against the Jaguars put the Eagles in first place in the NFC East, it still left many questions unanswered.

Pac-12 connections run deep in this one, with Chip Kelly holding firsthand knowledge from facing Andrew Luck and Colts offensive coordinator Pep Hamilton at Stanford.

"There are some similarities," Kelly said, "but it's not, you can't turn on Stanford tape and say this is exactly what they're doing."

Here are three of the most important issues facing Philly as it prepares to face Indy (8:30 p.m., ESPN).

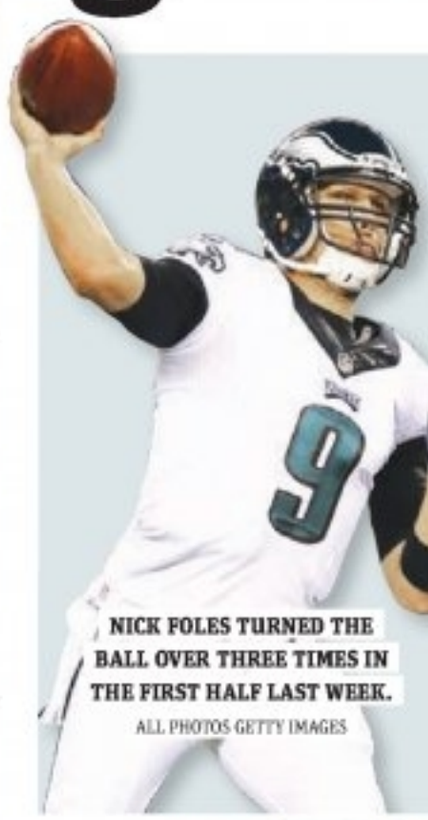
evan.macy@metro.us



NICK FOLES TURNED THE BALL OVER THREE TIMES IN THE FIRST HALF LAST WEEK.

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

1 Who's the real Nick Foles?

Which Nick Foles will the Eagles get Monday night? Will it be the indecisive, turnover machine from the first half against Jacksonville, or the calm, cool and collected captain comeback?

Foles did accumulate over 300 yards last week, and his accuracy improved as the game progressed. His performance against the Colts secondary will be the deciding factor in this one. With all his weapons healthy and ready to work, Foles will need to make sure he is getting rid of the ball quickly and getting everyone involved.

Foles has a lot in common with Colts' QB Andrew Luck, and the similarities are not lost on Eagles' coach Kelly.

"They're both really good-sized quarterbacks," Kelly said. "Really, the prototypical NFL quarterback that you're looking for from a size standpoint, and both were extremely tough."

2 Create some bad Luck

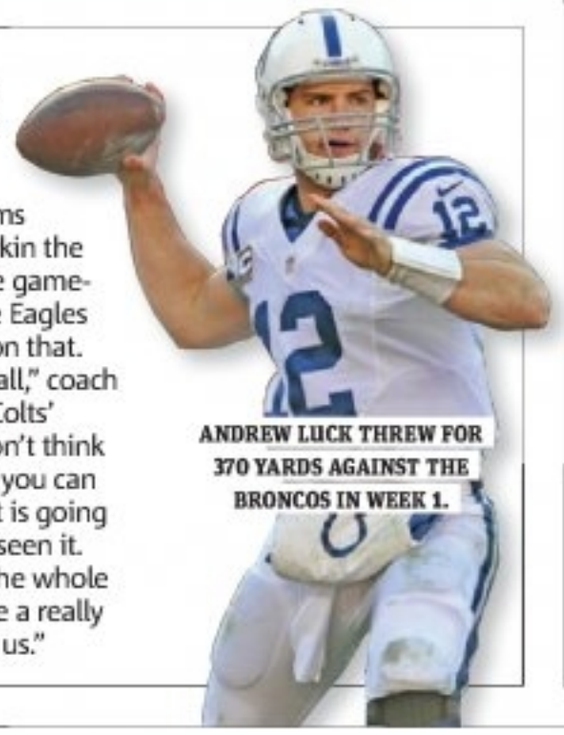
Everyone knows Andrew Luck is well on his way to becoming an elite quarterback. He will be stiff competition for the Eagles secondary, but it's a unit that played pretty well (save for two lapses in the first half) against Jacksonville. For all his success, Luck does turn the ball over. Luck has thrown 29 interceptions in 33 starts. He threw two picks last week versus the Broncos, and his occasional lack of accuracy gives Cary Williams and Brandon Boykin the opportunity to be game-changers. But the Eagles shouldn't count on that.

"He can do it all," coach Kelly said of the Colts' signal caller. "I don't think there is anything you can throw at him that is going to say he's never seen it. So he really has the whole package. It will be a really big challenge for us."



ANDREW LUCK THREW FOR 370 YARDS AGAINST THE BRONCOS IN WEEK 1.

3 A makeshift offensive line

The Eagles started the same five guys for all 17 games last season on the offensive line. With Lane Johnson sidelined due to a suspension, the Birds have also lost Jason Kelce and Allen Barbre to injury, with Matt Tobin inactive as well. Chip Kelly has been known for using his tackles at the tight end spot, or even in the slot to set up a screen pass or running play. Will the lack of stability and experience up front be a challenge for the Eagles?

Even with personnel changes, Kelly won't be changing much. Not even the makeup of his roster, one that dresses just seven offensive linemen.

"That's what everybody does in the league," Kelly said. "If you dress seven, you get two hurt, you're there. We only dress three running backs. What if two guys get hurt there? There is only one way you can slice up 46, so it depends on how you want to do it."

Redskins lose Jackson, Griffin III, still get win

NFL roundup. Washington is led to victory by Kirk Cousins after Robert Griffin III is carted off the field.

It is unknown if Robert Griffin III will be healthy enough to face the Eagles next week. / GETTY IMAGES

Many were calling for Redskins backup Kirk Cousins to get his shot after Washington's Week 1 loss. Cousins got that shot Sunday, hitting on 22-of-33 passes for 250 yards and two touchdowns, after starter Robert Griffin III went down with an ankle injury in the first quarter of a dominating 41-10 win over Jacksonville. Griffin was carted off the field, and former Eagles receiver DeSean Jackson also left the game in the first quarter with a left shoulder injury.

Panthers 24, Lions 7
The Lions offense, which looked so dynamic last Monday night, looked fatigued six days later. Detroit back Joique Bell was held to 36 yards on 10 carries and Matthew Stafford looked mortal, compiling a 72.5 rating as he hit on just 27-of-48 pass attempts while throwing an interception. Carolina quarterback Cam Newton returned and threw for 281 yards and a TD.

Patriots 30, Vikings 7
Devin McCourty's interception and 60-yard return of a Matt Cassel pass at the 7:16 mark of the first quarter signaled the beginning of a textbook Patriots road win and offered assurance that New England will once again be in the mix for AFC supremacy.

Browns 26, Saints 24
Brian Hoyer didn't get the payoff he was looking for last week in leading the Browns to a near comeback victory over the Steelers, but this time he earned Cleveland a "W" by performing well early, and late. Billy Cundiff's 29-yard field goal was good with three seconds remaining and Cleveland dropped the Saints to 0-2.

Bengals 24, Falcons 10
Cincinnati's rugged defense had little issue grounding the high-flying Falcons Sunday as Atlanta did not score a touchdown until there was 8:35 remaining in the game.

Bills 29, Dolphins 10
Buffalo is 2-0 for the first time since 2011, thanks in large part to C.J. Spiller's 102-yard kickoff return for a touchdown midway through the third quarter.

Texans 30, Raiders 14
Arian Foster rushed for 138 yards as the Texans scored early and held off Oakland en route to win No. 2 on the year. Defensive end caught his first NFL touchdown pass in the victory.

Chargers 30, Seahawks 21
The defending champs have finally fallen. After looking spectacular in last week's opener, the Chargers, and Antonio Gates (with three touchdown catches) hung on to down Seattle at home.

Broncos 24, Chiefs 17
Peyton Manning looked like his old, dominant self, tossing three touchdown passes and padding an incredible 143.9 QB rating against the Chiefs, who lost Jamaal Charles in the first half to injury.

Rams 19, Buccaneers 17
In a battle between two pretty bad teams, the field goal was king with St. Louis' Greg Zuerlein making four in the comeback.

Packers 31, Jets 24
The Jets failed to hang on to an early lead as Aaron Rodgers threw for 346 yards and three TD to close a 21-3 second quarter deficit.

MATT BURKE and EVAN MACY

Around the East

Giants fall, Cowboys roll

Eli Manning was again ineffective as he threw two interceptions in the Giants second loss of the young season, 25-14 to Arizona. Ted Ginn Jr.'s 71-yard punt return touchdown early in the fourth quarter put the Cardinals ahead after New York had done decent damage control in the second and third quarters. Drew Stanton got the start at quarterback for Arizona, with starter Carson Palmer dinged up, and he responded by taking care of the ball – throwing for 167 yards without a touchdown or interception. New York is off to another sluggish start at 0-2, a year after they began the 2013 season 0-6.

Cowboys 26, Titans 10
The Cowboys took plenty of heat after their Week 1 home loss to the 49ers but responded with a tremendous effort in Week 2. The Dallas defense shutout the Titans in the first half and forced Jake Locker into throwing two interceptions on the afternoon. Running back Shonn Greene was held to just 40 yards on five carries. DeMarco Murray led the way offensively for Dallas, as he ran for 167 yards and a touchdown on 29 carries. MATT BURKE

NFL. Kelly says making a challenge is tougher than it looks

Chip Kelly depends on his coaching staff to advise him on when to challenge a call and when not to. / GETTY IMAGES

To Eagles fans, and even NFL fans, it's pretty easy to see when a coach should challenge a play on the field.

Viewers at home on television get a multitude of camera angles along with analysis from former players and NFL experts.

But Chip Kelly — who is coaching his Eagles in real time along with an entire staff of coaches, playcallers and other team assistants — doesn't have the same luxury as a fan holding a remote.

"We don't get the same feed all the time that the people on TV get," Kelly said, who recently added a replay man to his staff. "So when you get, 'Hey, you should have challenged that because on TV they got that.' We're governed by the feed that we get in the box."

The Eagles are set to play a big game against the Colts in enemy territory Monday night. And it seems like on the road is where Kelly has the most trouble making a replay decision.

"There have been some games I've asked should we challenge, and the guys in the box say we haven't seen a replay yet," the coach said. "And it always seems like it happens when we're on the road. I don't know how that happens."

With big decisions to make regarding what is and is not a catch, and what is and is not a touchdown, Kelly and the rest of the NFL's coaches are without the same technology fans have in the stands and at home.

"Maybe someone should have their phone on and they can text them from home," Kelly said. "But there are a lot of times after the game, 'Why didn't you challenge it?' Well, you talk to the guys in booth, that's not what they saw. That's not the feed they were given all the time, and it's not always the same as it is on television."

Close calls

Chip Kelly was average during his debut season in 2013 at making successful challenges.

- Kelly was 3-for-6 last year with the red flag.
- Chiefs' Andy Reid and Dolphins' Joe Philbin were best with 7-of-8 calls reversed.

Flyers have 'Big D'

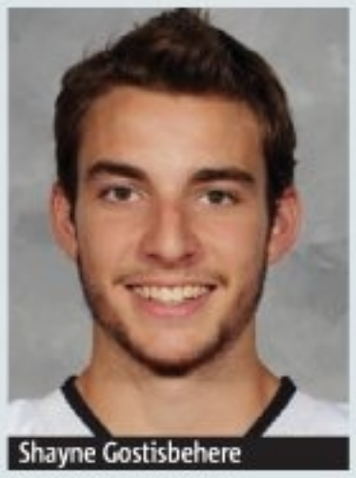
Flyers rookie camp already showcasing defense

With rookie camp underway, Flyers fans may just be seeing the Orange and Black's future building blocks side-by-side.

Flyers' 6-foot-7 Samuel Morin and Shayne Gostisbehere (fresh off a Frozen Four title in Philadelphia last spring) have looked like seasoned pros already.



Shayne Gostisbehere

"I am out there coaching and not thinking two years down the road," Flyers coach Craig Berube said. "I'm thinking right now. But when it's all done and you're sitting around, you can't stop and not think about that, for sure."

The Flyers front office and coaching staff hasn't spoken much about the direct impact Flyers' prospects could have on this year's team, but it seems probable they may have a chance at cracking the roster.

"You really notice Gostisbehere," Berube said. "The way he gets up the ice and skates. He's so smooth. It's hard not to notice him." METRO

Revere still has eyes on making Phillies history

MLB. Outfielder Ben Revere is in the thick of the NL batting race.

The collapse of '64 had yet to happen, there was no such thing as a Met and there was a certain pride to being a singles hitter. The year was 1958, which was the last time a Phillie won a batting title. Richie Ashburn, a classic singles hitter, took his second NL batting crown that season.

"It's amazing that no other Phillie has done it since," Ben Revere said. "Just think about how many great players were Phillies, and none of them won the batting title since then. It's hard to believe."

Revere, a pure singles hitter, has a chance at winning the batting title, which is about all Phillies fans can hope for aside for perhaps rooting for Cole Hamels to finish with double digit wins or for Chase Utley to close out the campaign healthy.

The Phillies diminutive centerfielder was leading the league last week but entering Sunday's game against the Marlins, Revere was hitting .309 — eight points off the pace.

"I'm just trying to hit the ball hard somewhere and hopefully I'll get on base," Revere said. "You can't worry about batting titles and things like that. You win them or you don't. I'm not worried about the personal stuff. I'm about team goals. I would trade winning a batting title or another personal accomplishment in exchange for going to the playoffs."

Well, that's not happening this season. The Nationals eliminated the Phillies from the NL East race. Against all odds, the team could make it as a second wildcard, if everything broke right for the Phillies and everything went wrong for the teams in front of them. Even though Revere dreams about that possibility, it's about as plausible as a 20-homer season in 2015 for the power-challenged leadoff hitter.

Chasing hardware

Revere student of baseball history

With the real prize for the Phillies, a berth into October's playoffs, all but an impossible dream, outfielder Ben Revere still has much to play for.

The chances are much better that Revere takes the batting crown than a ridiculous Phillies surge and an utter collapse by a number of teams. Winning a batting title has to appeal to Revere, who is a history buff.

"I am all about looking back and history," Revere said. "It's cool. And part of the reason I love baseball is due to the history of the game."

Can Revere make history and become the Phillies' first batting champ in 56 years?

"I would rather make history as the team that beat the odds and made the playoffs at this point," Revere said.

Being nine games out with 13 left makes it nearly impossible for the Phillies to come within sniffing distance of the playoffs, but if Revere gets hot down the stretch, he can score some hardware for the mantel.

"I'm not going to think about it," Revere said. "Who knows what will happen by the end of the season?"

MLB. Papelbon blows three-run lead, ejected for gesture in loss

Jonathan Papelbon had saved 14 consecutive games heading into the ninth inning of Sunday's matinee series finale with the Marlins.

But all good things come to an end, and Papelbon's horrendous inning handed Miami a 5-4 win and a series victory as well.

David Buchanan pitched well into the seventh inning, surrendering just one run.

The Phillies offense got RBI from Maikel Franco, Domonic Brown, Carlos Ruiz and Chase Utley, building a 4-1 lead after eight innings.

Papelbon raised his ERA from 1.56 to 2.10 in the loss.

GETTY IMAGES

The Phillies closer then proceeded to give up four hits and a walk. He also threw a wild pitch to bring in Christian Yelich as the go-ahead run.

Papelbon was ejected from the game by home plate umpire Joe West after he grabbed his crotch walking off the mound.

Final trip

The Phillies head west to start their final road trip with seven games in California. They begin the trip with a long four-game series in San Diego. All four games are 10:10 p.m. starts.

- Monday: Jerome Williams (5-6, 5.44 ERA) vs. Andrew Cashner (3-7, 2.40 ERA)
- Tuesday: A.J. Burnett (8-16, 4.34 ERA) vs. Ian Kennedy (10-13, 3.77 ERA)
- Wednesday: Cole Hamels (8-7, 2.51 ERA) vs. Eric Stults (7-16, 4.49 ERA)
- Thursday: Kyle Kendrick (9-12, 4.72 ERA) vs. Tyson Ross (13-14, 2.81 ERA)
